

Discovering the landscape

Discoveries shape the history of mankind. Driven by curiosity and the search for vital resources, man intrudes deeper and deeper into landscapes. From various starting points and through different requirements he opens up new dimensions. Mankind looks to the natural diversity of the Earth, be it from an intellectual, spiritual or artistic perspective or simply out of a need to survive. Metaphorically speaking, man becomes the discoverer, sometimes even the conqueror, of new landscapes and worlds spanning from microcosm to macrocosm.

This intensive interaction is reflected in the diversity of cultures on Earth. It is the basis and driving force of the intellectual and cultural evolution of mankind.

Editor:

Geological Survey of Austria

A - 1030 Wien, Neulinggasse 38

www.geologie.ac.at

Concept: Hans P. Schönlaub

Text: Hans P. Schönlaub & Thomas Hofmann

Printed by: Holzhausen, Wien (www.holzhausen.at)

Graphic design: Andreas Ortag (www.ortag.at)

Vienna, 2005

ISBN: 3-85316-22-0

EURO 19,00